

5/4/95/97

Abstract

Process for increasing the yield in plants

Described are processes for increasing the yield in plants in which nucleotide sequences are expressed under the control of companion cell specific promoters. The nucleotide sequences encode proteins the expression of which leads to a stimulation of the loading of the phloem with photoassimilates.